Excerpt: . . . 11 and to seek prevention, response, and reconstitution solutions. The safety of our Nation is of course our first and foremost overriding objective. The Justice Department has been working across govern-ment to address infrastructure issues for several years. However, the attacks of September 11 have heightened our awareness of these issues and created a new sense of urgency. U. S. infrastructure protection efforts are the shared responsi-bility of many entities, both public and private. Many of this joint effort is based upon the principle that a robust exchange of infor-mation about threats to and actual attacks on critical infrastruc-tures is a critical element for successful infrastructure protection. The following, of course, are just a few of the entities that are dedi-cated to this principle: The National Infrastructure Protection Cen-ter, headed up by Mr. Dick; the...
