

Eat, Drink and Be Merry: Anecdotes and Tales from the Old Neighborhood, Lawrence - My Hometown

By Richard Edward Noble

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 204 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.5in. In Lawrence, my hometown we had Lawtons by the Sea. Lawtons was typical of Lawrence and atypical of everywhere else in the world. First of all it had a fire hydrant in the lobby. It wasn't really a fire hydrant but it looked like a fire hydrant. It was some sort of on/off valve that had something to do with regulating the flow of water or water level of the canal that sat just behind Lawtons back door hence the comic description, Lawtons by the Sea. The canals that were constructed back in the 1800s to provide power to the textile machinery and were the reason for the initial existence of the town of Lawrence, MA, added another colorful euphemism to the old Mill Town lore. We laughingly referred to our polluted, little, textile village as the Venice of the Northeast. Reading about that other Venice over in Italy, surprisingly, it seems to be just about as polluted as our little Venice. Not only that, that Italian Venice is sinking. Lawrence may be going down hill, but it...
